1. Is your essay a refutation, a counterargument, or a combination of both? If it is a combination (and most are), explain how you integrated the refutation and the counterargument. If you used one or the other, explain why, considering the essay and your stance, it made sense to write either a refutation or a counterargument. Convince me.

2. What was the most difficult part of writing the rebuttal essay?

3. What new insights did you develop as you wrote your essay?
4. Put a star in the margin next to the best idea in your essay.

5. Put a ☺ in the margin next to the best written sentence.

6. Is there anything else I should know before evaluating this essay?
